BIO

Rising Country star Denae Gardner wants to be around for awhile. The California native and Idaho transplant has no plans of being the proverbial flash-in-the-pan.

"I just want to keep building in a positive direction, developing a fan base, and getting a little more popular with each single."

The 4D recording artist is well on her way to that kind of a career. She enjoyed her first taste of radio success with "Runaround," and with the release of "Heartache Train," she's back for what she hopes will be another trip up the charts.

Gardner's story begins in Northern California and now she lives in Boise, Idaho. Her musical style is a diverse one. She calls it "Rockin' Country Blues with a Bluegrass Twist." She comes by that style honestly.

"I watched a live DVD of Led Zeppelin when I was in the eighth or ninth grade. Watching that really inspired me, and then, I heard the music of Etta James. That's when I knew that's what I wanted to do the rest of my life."

Appreciating the rich musical history that has come before her is very important to Denae. "You have to appreciate where music came from," she says. "That's a really big thing with me. That's why I listen to so much of the old stuff."

Denae says that as much as she loves recording, she really wants to take her music out on the road to the people. That's where she feels right at home. "Being in the studio is a blast, but I know that when I go to concerts, I love it when I can forget about the world for about two hours. I want to create that for people, so they will forget about things that are troubling them."

"Denae is a very articulate and charming young lady and gave a sizzling performance for us."
